Ghost Town References

Los Conquistadores remember Franklin: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 21, 23, 24, May 12, 1968.

The ghost town of Monte Cristo ... at the foot of the "mountain of gold": Sunset, p. 18, 20, September 1960.

Franklin—it's about as lost as it can get; there's not much left of the little mining community which was the center of a rip-roaring labor dispute: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 10-11, September 3, 1961.

Lost town of King County—busy Cedar Mountain of former years now is only a memory, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 2, April 2, 1961.

Still prospecting for gold--hopeful miners keep digging in Cascades: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, cover page, p. 4-7, December 30, 1956.

Geiger counters click at Republic as old mining center hopes to build future on uranium, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 2, September 8, 1957.

Its population has dwindled, but there still is life around Chesaw, old mine town named for Chinese, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, cover page, p. 2, November 27, 1960.

Books

