This Douglas fir log was harvested from a forest that had been scorched by one of the many large-scale wildfires that have ravaged drought-parched eastern Washington in recent years. The log and the standing trees around it still have value. In many cases the trees retain their structural integrity while losing value because of the undesirable stain left by infestations of insects which attack weakened trees. Salvaged trees are harvested soon after purchase because wood that has been injured by wildfire or disease can degrade quickly. More than 50 million board feet of timber was sold in salvage auctions from state-owned forests damaged in 2015 wildfires. DNR Photo/Dave Richards

Introduction

This is the 67th edition of the Washington Timber Harvest Report. The data covers the timber harvest of public and private forests in the 2015 harvest year. The report is based on data collected by the state's Department of Revenue for calculating the state's Forest Excise Tax. The report includes four tables with statewide harvest totals, sorted by county, ownership, and species. Tables for each county -- sorted by owner and species -- are displayed on separate pages.

In 2015 total harvest was more than 2.8 billion board feet which was about 400 million board feet less than the harvest in 2014. Western Washington's 19 counties yielded 2.3 billion board feet, about 82 percent of the statewide harvest. Eastern Washington's 14 counties yielded more than half a billion board feet.

The top three timber counties were all in the southwest region, including Lewis County (with 13 percent of the statewide total), Pacific County (10 percent) and Grays Harbor County (9 percent). More than half of the state's harvest came from the eight counties in southwest Washington. Stevens County was the top county in eastern Washington, followed by Kittitas, Klickitat and Spokane counties.

More than 1.2 billion board feet of Douglas-fir timber was harvested in Washington in 2015. Other major species include western hemlock (650 million board feet), other conifers (715 million board feet), Ponderosa pine (46.4 million board feet), other pines (33 million board feet) and western redcedar (51 million board feet). Hardwood timber totalled 108 million board feet with red alder at 65 million board feet.

More than 45 percent of all timber harvested from U.S. tribal lands in the U.S. came from Washington State, according to a Congressional report submitted by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Twelve Washington tribes harvested 172 million board feet of timber in 2015.

The report is available in two formats (PDF files and Excel spreadsheets). The content is divided into four statewide summary tables and 32 county tables. Volumes are listed in thousand board feet (mbf), Scribner.

Tables include total harvest volumes by county, species and ownership.

Totals for Washington's timber harvests are also displayed by:

- Eastside and Westside log volume by ownership, county and statewide totals
- Eastside and Westside volume by ownership, species and statewide totals
